Community Coffee Time

The Latest on... Lyme Disease

Thursday, August 3, 9:30am, Weare Public Library

Join Carolyn Fredette, MPH, from the Infectious Disease Surveillance Section, Division of Public Health Services, NH Department of Health and Human Services, to hear about Lyme Disease and how it is affecting New Hampshire.

Lyme and other tick-borne diseases are spread to humans and animals by the bite of an infected tick. In New Hampshire, and across the United States, Lyme disease is the most commonly reported tick-borne disease. Anaplasmosis, babesiosis and Powassan virus are other tick-borne diseases that have been documented in New Hampshire, while ehrlichiosis, tularemia and Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever are tick-borne diseases that may be encountered in travel to other parts of the country, including other New England states.

Lyme disease, anaplasmosis, babesiosis and Powassan virus are transmitted by the bite of the black-legged tick (Ixodes scapularis), formerly known as the deer tick. Black-legged ticks have four life stages: eggs, larvae, nymphs and adults. The black-legged tick nymphs are most active in the late spring through summer months (usually May through August) and are the most likely to infect humans with tickborne diseases.

Tick-borne diseases can be serious illnesses and can affect people of any age. The best way to prevent being infected with a tick-borne disease is to take precautions to avoid being bitten by a tick. However, if you are bitten by a tick, remove that tick as soon and as safely as possible. As always, if you have any questions or concerns about a tick bite, contact your healthcare provider(s).

Information on tick-borne disease educational materials and data are available from the NH Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Public Health Services (DPHS) and can be found on the Lyme and Other Tickborne Diseases Publications and Data page.

The New Hampshire Department of Agriculture, Markets and Food offers free tick identification to New Hampshire residents. The intent is to monitor the distribution of tick species in NH. To submit your sample, complete the Tick Submission Form (www.agriculture.nh.gov/publications-forms/documents/tick-submission-form.pdf) and mail the tick and form as described. Ticks submitted will not be tested for disease-causing pathogens. (Lyme Disease facts courtesy of the NH Department of Health and Human Services.)

There has been a rash of cases here in Weare, so arm yourself with the knowledge to keep you and your family safe. This is a drop-in coffee gathering in the Paige Room. FMI: wearepl@comcast.net or 529-2044.

Help Lost Pets Get Home!

Weare Animal Control

The Weare Animal Control Facebook page (www.facebook.com/Weareanimalcontrol) regularly runs lost and missing pet notifications. Visit and like the page, then share it with friends and family in Weare and surrounding towns. The more people connected, the more people we reach to help our furry friends make it back home as soon as possible.

Weare Area Writers Group

Friday, August 4, 10:30am

Weare Public Library Sawyer Room

The Group met on Friday July 21, and will meet next on Friday August 4th at 10:30 AM at the Weare Library downstairs in the Sawyer Room. The most exciting aspect of the day's events was seeing one of our own authors "GO LIVE" on Amazon with publication of her first book! Ebenezer Mudgett and the Pine Tree Riot, written by our own Connie Evans is now available as an eBook on Amazon.com. The link is: www.amzn.com/B07451MW32.

Those of you who enjoy your history lessons in a palatable format will appreciate seeing the characters of the late 1700's come to life. Did you like the TV series Sons of Liberty? Were you lucky enough to see the musical, Hamilton? Like those shows, this book enhances the history of the time with an easy to read depiction of the tensions building all around our ancestors. In fact, I would not be surprised if you see it on the screen someday. If you are a present day citizen of New Hampshire, this book will make you proud of those who struggled to lay the ground work for our lives today.

If your summer plans permit, please plan to join us August 4th. If you have a writer visiting for a few days, bring him or her along as well. For any questions, contact Sharon Czarnecki at czar5@comcast.net
