John Stark Spring Concert

Tuesday, May 22, 6:30pm, JSRHS Cafe

Music's ability to tackle social/cultural issues is nothing new, but this year the John Stark Regional High School choral and band teachers took it on in a big way (it's a competency in their curriculum). Concert chorus, concert band, theatre and visual art will all play a role in the Spring Concert, which will showcase how music can both influence and reflect social and cultural issues. "In concert band, we decided to focus on all female composers after realizing that almost all the music we've ever played has been by male composers. This is just one more profession where women aren't very well represented," said JSRHS music teacher Dan Williams. After doing some digging, he managed to find a short list of female band composers who are rather prolific.

One of the composers, Alex Sharpio, was able to Facetime with Concert Band students so they could get feedback from her about the specific piece they are performing (Paper Cut) and get her help with some of the technical aspects of the piece. Paper Cut is a very unique work which involves manipulation of sheets of paper as well as instrument playing with the use of black light effects. The students also had the opportunity to ask her about her experience as a female composer during the Facetime session. Suggested donation: $5 for adults and $3 for students and seniors.

American Indians of Weare

Friday, May 25, 7pm, Weare Town Hall

The Weare Historical Society and the Friends of the Weare Public Library welcome Sherry Gould for a free presentation on American Indians of Weare, Friday, May 25 at 7pm at the Weare Town Hall. Gould will be talking about local place names, giving the good, the bad and the ugly aspects of places we call by names associated with the original people of New Hampshire. Or are they related to anything close to the original people? Come hear some tales of the facts and lore and undecided origins of local place names.

The first people who came to what is now New Hampshire arrived about 11,000 years ago. Their descendants divided into bands-often called tribes. Among them were the Penacook, Winnepesaukee, Pigwacket, Sokoki, Cowasuck and Ossipee. All spoke related dialects of the Abenaki language. Today these people are known collectively as the Abenaki, which is often translated as "People of the Dawnland." (woban means day-break and ski means earth or land).

Sherry Gould is a member of the Nulhegan Band of the Coosuk - Abenaki Nation, and is a basket maker and fiber artist from Warner, NH. She was born and raised in New Hampshire, and studied Abenaki fancy baskets in 2004 and 2007 with master artist Jeanie Brink of Barre, VT through grants from the New Hampshire Arts Council, Traditional Arts apprenticeship program. She studied utilitarian Abenaki basket-making in 2006 under master artist Newt Washburn of Bethlehem, NH. From 2009-2013 Sherry has taught four apprentices, some through an award from the NH Arts Council, Traditional Arts program. She became a juried basket maker through the League of NH Craftsmen, and is the first Native American artist in the league.

"Augmented Reality" at WMS & CWUES

Students at the Weare Middle and Center Woods Upper Elementary Schools had the chance to try out the latest Google for Education product, the Google Pioneer AR (Augmented Reality) at school this week. Unlike Virtual Reality (VR) where students wear goggles and are "transported" to another environment, AR 'projects' an image so it looks like it is in the room with the student.

"It is remarkable and the 3D images look very real," said Technology Integrator for both schools Joelle Henry. "Utilizing the camera on a smart phone, the students could "see" 3D models of objects like volcanos and DNA molecules up close in a virtual environment." Teachers at WMS and Center Woods Upper Elementary were trained in the morning to learn how to run an AR class. They then rotated their students through AR classrooms for half-hour blocks. Topics taught using the Google Pioneer AR technology included the solar system, dinosaurs, earthquakes, and ocean floor.

"Students could zoom up as close as they wanted, and sometimes even go 'inside' the 3D image to see what would be inside the animal or planet or whatever they were viewing," said Mrs. Henry. Weare Middle and Center Woods Upper Elementary Schools hope to use this technology in the fall when Google hopes have the final Augmented Reality software ready for distribution.
